I'm Robert, and I'm a Web Developer currently based in Southern California. My goal is to bring the best presentation of the client's products in all modern browsers and mobile devices, while also ensuring the best experience for the visitor. I think understanding the visitor is always important. I've worked in web development for over a decade and the past 8+ years as part of a dedicated teams on various aspects of web development and project management. Including responsive redesign of websites, responsive email templates, and theming third-party web apps. One of my greatest strengths is understanding people and wanting to serve them. From our customers to my teammates and supervisors my ability to relate to people has enabled our product to be better. I believe we should never stop learning and excellence is only found in being adaptable.
